

The Day's News in Pictures

DEATH INSTEAD OF LIBERTY—Convicts who confessed that they were ringleaders in an attempt to flee Folsom prison, California, may die if convicted of assault and conspiracy to murder, which carries the death penalty. Scenes of the prison outbreak shown above, five of the captured prison guards and the warden who were released by the convicts after a siege by troops; lower left, the library building where the convicts who mutinied were barricaded. This photo, taken inside the inner wall of the prison, shows the door in the center of the building which guards attempted to break down; right, Roy E. Stokes, left, and Walter S. Burke, who confessed they led the revolt.

SOCIETY AT WORK—Representatives of three prominent American families are dancing in the ballet of a Max Reinhardt production in New York. They are, left to right, Agnes George DeMille, daughter of William DeMille; Ruth Pickering Pinchot, sister-in-law of Gifford Pinchot, and Mrs. S. Jay Kaufman, wife of the New York journalist.

COMING DOWN TO EARTH—Fireman Ray St. George, of the Los Angeles fire department, leaps from a 100-foot ladder, during rehearsals for the police and fire departments field meet.

ROUGH ON BANDITS—"Ben King," trained German police dog, shows his value as a bodyguard by knocking down his owner and trainer, Fred Houser, who has obligingly posed as a "bandit"—all this in preparation for the Los Angeles firemen and police field day.

WASHINGTON BRIDE

A wedding of recent interest to capital society was that of Miss Mary Patricia Tumulty, daughter of the secretary to the late President Wilson and Mrs. Joseph Tumulty. She was married to Robert Cahill, of Washington, before many persons high in the councils of the Democratic party.

VENICE COMPLAINS—Of too much water! Gondoliers were literally swamped with work recently when waters of the Adriatic sea were driven northward after a series of severe storms. Above, the piazza at St. Mark's Square, under water; upper left, a pedestrian being helped through the waters in front of the Doges' Palace, and, right, the island of San Maggiora, across the canal from the Doges' Palace, seen from the Mole, submerged during the flood.

IL DUCE GESTURES—Benito Mussolini, in characteristic pose, acknowledges the salute of his black-shirted followers, on the fifth anniversary of the Fascist government in Italy. This photo was taken in Rome.

PLAYING THE PONIES—Is a favorite diversion south of the Rio Grande. Here is a snapshot of the crowd at Tijuana opening, with Americans predominating in the throng.

WHAT, NO BATHTUBS?—Because none of the bath houses at Hot Springs, Ark., are large enough to hold Clifford Thompson, 22, eight feet, three inches high, the local federal head allows him to use Uncle Sam's big hot pool. Thompson, whose home is in Stevens Point, Wis., weighs 210 pounds.

NO TRAPPINGS OF ROYALTY—Distinguish this royal couple watching a tennis match at Bangkok. They are the King and Queen of Siam. The king was educated in England. Both are interested in all forms of sports.